

Overview

A healthcare worker is a person whose job is to help sick people get better or to keep healthy people from getting sick. Doctors, nurses, dentists, and opticians are some of the many types of healthcare workers. What are some of the tasks that healthcare workers do to help us stay healthy? What tools do they use? How might computers help healthcare workers?

Web Resources

To learn more about healthcare workers, consider exploring the following Web sites:

- [NOTE: The localization team must identify and insert the names and addresses of two or three Web sites that feature information about healthcare workers or about how healthcare workers use computers at work. The United States, for example, could use the American Public Health Association: International Health Section Web site at www.apha-ih.org or the Directors of Health Promotion and Education Web site at www.dhpe.org.]

What do you want to learn about healthcare workers? Why? Where might you find this information?

Healthcare Worker Activities

Now you will use your technology skills to help a healthcare worker discover how computers can help her at work as you complete some of the featured healthcare worker activities:

- Healthcare Worker Activity: Survey Form
- Healthcare Worker Activity: Pictograph
- Healthcare Worker Activity: Interactive Diagram
- Healthcare Worker Activity: Public Service Announcement